Introduction

While many dog owners want what's best for their dogs, sometimes little thought is given to what we feed them.

Loving dog owners, sometimes, get carried away with those touting advertisements of yummy doggie snacks and gourmet canine goodies. In our frenzy to spoil our dog rotten, we just love to believe in what the manufacturers' claim.

If we were to trust the TV and magazine advertisements, all we have to do is pour some kibble that we buy at the supermarket in the bowl and make sure they have lots of fresh water.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

In reality, in order to have a happy, healthy life and a long lifespan, your pup needs quality ingredients, the right nutritional proportions, and something that will keep him full and satisfied without packing on the pounds.

Some dog owners are lucky to have a veterinarian, who supports the dog owner's efforts to feed the dog a varied diet that includes vegetables, fruits and various meats.

For the dog owner, this can be a tough balance to strike, especially when you factor in the work required of you to make the food. As you know, it's super-easy to go pick up those bags and cans of chow every week, but you never know exactly which preservatives go into them and whether or not they're really satisfying your dogs nutritional needs.

The only way to be absolutely positive of those things is to make the food yourself.
